Methods of payment for student fees

Student fees are, in principle, not accepted over the counter at the University. This policy is to prevent risks to students (from loss, theft, mugging, etc.)

Examination fees

Undergraduate degree students should select one of the following payment methods when submitting their application online and make payment using the relevant method: payment at a convenience store or by Pay-easy, online banking, or credit card.

Postgraduate and transferring undergraduate degree students may pay by bank transfer using the transfer form sent with the application forms, pay at a convenience store, by credit card and other forms of electronic payments.

Admission fee

Undergraduate students are to select one of the following payment methods—convenience store payment, Pay-easy, online banking, or credit card—on the admission procedure website and make the payment.

Students enrolled in graduate schools or as transfer students in undergraduate programs are required to make payments through bank transfer, convenience store payment or credit card payment via the website, etc.

Tuition fees

To be paid by direct debit. The debit date is the 27th of May (first semester) and November (second semester) (In cases where this date is a bank holiday, the debit will be taken on the next working day). These dates are fixed each year. Debits will be taken from any student who has applied for exemption or extension in payment of tuition fees according to the schedule with the evaluation results.

Details of fees and debit dates are available at all times on the Kyushu University website

(<https://www.kyushu-u.ac.jp/ja/> or search “ Tuition Fee Payment ”) and the student portal system.

Payment of partial fees (researchers, etc.)

The Student Affairs section of the department a student is attending will provide payment deadlines and details of bank transfers.
